TRAINING FOR A WIFE.

William Newell was a strange humorist. In his boyhood days he had been a very hard worker; having been left at an early age an orphan, his own hands had kept him out of the poor-house. He claimed to be the smartest boy in town, and every holiday he held himself in readiness to prove his claim, if any choose to dispute it; and year after year he stepped into the ring, wrestled with and threw every sturdy young fellow that dared to show himself upon the village green. When he was twenty-one he married, much against her father's wish, pretty Ida Lee, the miller's daughter. A few days subsequent, he received intelligence that he had fallen heir to an immense fortune from a distant connection in England, of whom he had never heard before.

The fortune did not change William, although it did every one else in the village, and people began to call him Mr. Newell, or Squire Newell, until he threatened to whip any one within an inch of their lives who should call him anything but plain Bill Newell. He bought the large farm formerly owned by Squire Fianders, where he gathered the finest stock of blood-horses and dogs in the country, and the farm of Bill Newell was celebrated for miles around as the best place in the world for sport on a holiday. There was a constant routine of foot races and horse races, cricket and base ball matches, pitching quoits and throwing weights, sparring and fencing, leap-ing and jumping, boat racing and wrestling, and, in fact, all manner of rugged, manly

One daughter blessed the marriage of William Newell and Ida Lee—a charming girl, with all her mother's beauty and all her father's robust health. As young Ida grew, she was sade an honorary member of all the boating, cricket, and base ball clubs about the country, and at the age of fifteen she could sit a horse, handle an oar, or fire a pistol, with many an older and more experienced head, and half the young fellows in the country round about had fancied themselves in love with the young and pretty Ida; but their ardor was generally cooled by the bold assertion of Newell, that the man who would marry his daughter must first out-ride him and cut-run him, whin him with the advantage of the standard of the him, whip him with the gloves and with the foils, and beat him with quoits and cricket bat. In vain Mrs. Newell called her husband's decision absurd and foolish, and tried to laugh him out of it; he was firm in the theory which he had advanced, and the hand of his daughter remained unsought.

During the summer succeeding Ida's eighteenth birthday, her mother decided that she should go into society some; that she should see something of the world beyond the Newell farm; and to this end a trip was arranged to Niagara and Saratoga. Mr. Newell raised no objections, and the projected tour was carried into effect. At the Falls, Mrs. and Miss Newell made the acquaintance of a young gentleman from New York, Albert Whipple, a young man of good family, fortune and education. Whipple followed the Newell's to the Springs, and his acquaintance ripened into intimacy, and in due time he proposed for the hand of Ida. Mrs. Newell told him candidly of her husband's peculiarities; she favored his suit. thought him a capital match, would be pleased to welcome him to the farm, but she warned him of what he might expect from Mr. Newell. Nothing daunted, young Whipple re-turned to the farm with the ladies, and was introduced to Mr. Newell, who looked at him attentively from head to foot, and muttered : "Pooh! a milk sop-a candy boy! He couldn't run twenty rods to save his life!" "But he is of excellent family," suggested

Mrs. N., in an under tone. "Good pedigree, hey! Fine blood you say Well, I hope he won't disgrace it." (To the young man)-"Do you ever put on the gloves?" "Gloves? O, yes, sir, I wear gloves—sixes," replied Whipple. Pshaw, boy, I don't mean that; do you ever put on boxing gloves? Do you ever spar? practice in the manly art of self-defense?"

- " No, sir." "Do you play at cricket?"
 "No, sir."
- " Do you wrestle?" " No, sir." " Row ?"
- "Not much, sir."
- "Ride?" "Some."
- " Hunt?"
- "But very little, sir." " Shoot?
- " A mere trifle." "Well, my boy, look ye here; you're a goodhearted fellow enough, I guess, but your body isn't worth a farthing; your limbs are no larger than a bat stick, and you couldn't stand on your pins against a strong breeze any way. Now my lad if you have any idea of my daughter Ida, I wish you to understand that the man who marries her must first be able to throw any man in the township; he must be the best man with the gloves, rifle and bat in the country; in fact he must beat me with all of these; then I'll talk with him about the girl. If you like the idea of a course of training, you are welcome to my house as long as you choose to stay; but mind you, don't let me catch you making love until you are the best man," "But," interposed young Whipple-"There are no buts in the matter, my young man; either you must train or travel. Why, Ida would make a pretty wife for a young city dandy like you. She can ride, and row, and shoot, and I'il bet a dollar that she can bowl an under hand ball square on to the wickets

As young Whipple did not know what bowl ing an under-hand ball square on the wickets meant, he did not accept the wager; but after giving Mr Newell's proposition considerable thought, he decided to remain upon the farm, for the ostensible purpose of training, it could do no harm, and something might turn up fa-vorable to his suit. So he informed Mr. Newell of his decision to remain at the farm and try a little training.

"Well, I'm glad of it," said the "best man in the country;" "and as you may as well commence first as last, you shall ride with us tonight. Ida gees with us, and you shall ride Black Dick; he is the fastest runner in the stable, and your horse must be very tired."

Away they went, four miles out and return, and Whipple in the saddle of the hardest horse he had ever mounted. He was net very fond of here-back riding at best, and when he threw himself from the back of Black Dick, who had 60,000, vehicles 700, sleighs 1,500. neither cantered or trotted a single step since he left the door, the young inclined to give up training where he was; but as he assisted Ida from her saddle, and waited on her into the house, he concluded to remain a few days longer, and he retired to his room, decided not to ride Black Dick again in a

The next morning Whipple was awakened by a terrible pounding on his chamber door, accompanied with implicit commands to get up and dress, for there was a fox. As Albert did not understand a word that was said, but only had a confused idea that he was wanted for something, he dressed himself hurriedly and went below, where, in the yard, he saw the farmer and his servants leading out and saddling horses.

"Come, lad." said Mr. Newell, "hurry up; he can't have more than two or three miles the start of us." "Who's got the start?" asked Whipple, in wonderment. "The lads and dogs by this time, I hope. But get into your saddle; we are all ready."

Hardly knowing what he did, the young man mounted the horse nearest him, and a moment after the party rode briskly off. The horse was a better hunter than the rider; and, in spite of all he could do, Albert kept a good position in the chase. Two hours' hard riding brought them in sight of the dogs, and a follow of another hour drove the fox to his hole. By this time Whipple had become so excited in the other hour drove the fox to his hole. By this time Whipple had become so excited in the ancholy narratives of death amongst the poor from affair that he was the first to spring from his exposure to the cold.

horse and begin to dig out the prey. From this day he took hold of sport as though he liked it. To be sure, there were times when he felt a little squeamish in the matter—when he put on the gloves with some one that would knock him out of all kind of time, or bring the claret too freely; but he took hold of training in good earnest, and in a few weeks he was by no means a poor competitor.

All summer long Albert devoted his time to training, and in the fall he could show as good work as the best of them. In the closing crieket match of the season, being married tersus single, his bowling and batting scored better than Newell's; he could ride or row with any man in the country; he could cover a half dime at twenty yards every time; there was not his match at single-sticks or with broad-swords among their acquaintances, and there were but few of the gentlemen who met at the farm that could be induced to put the gloves on with him. Yet Mr Newell would always evade the subject of matrimony when it was introduced. and tell Albert to wait a few weeks, everything would be fixed all right in a short time, until the young man had grown tired of that story. One evening, while they were sitting together at the supper table-it was after the last day's sport of the season, which had been closed with a wrestling match, in which he had thrown all who offered themselves, and closed by tripping Newell three times, that gentleman remarked "Well, my young man, I didn't ever expect such work from you! I'm proud of you!" "And willing to give me your daughter?"

asked Whipple. "Certainly man. But you mustn't marry yet; a young fellow with your pluck don't need awife; besides, my daughter is very young."

"So am I young."
"I know it, and mustn't think of marrying "Mr. Newell-excuse me, Bill Newell-I came to your farm for one object; I consented to remain here and be put through a course of training that nearly killed me, for the purpose of accomplishing that object. You know, sir, that I am now a Mile in strength, and a perfect Nimrod to hunt. I can beat anything in the

"But you must not marry this fall. Stop with us this winter; there will be plenty of hunting and plenty of sport. You may marry in the spring."

"Sir, if you insist on my remaining single and stopping here this winter, you will be sorry for it; for mark me, I'll run your dogs and horses to death; I'll have all of your servants away with me on the chase week in and week out, and when I come home I'll bring all the young fellows from the village, to play | | SNYDER, a game of ball in the parlors; I'll convert one of the upper chambers into a ring, and we'll spar and wrestle up there all day long; and when I have beaten, every one else we'll have you up there; I'll knock you down till you can't get up again; I'll turn the trellis over which the grape vines grow at the rear of the which the grape vines grow at the rear of the summer-house into a tenpin alley; and I'll make a cock-pit of the summer-house, and have a brace of fighting cocks down here from the city; in fact, I'll raise the very devil about the house unless you consent to my marriage with

"But, my dear fellow-" "There are no buts in the matter, sir; either you must consent, or suffer. I have fulfilled my part of the agreement, you must fulfil yours. "But Ida don't want to marry." "Yes she does, sir."

"How do you know?" "She told me so horself, this very morn

Mr. Newell stood for a moment contemplat ing the matter. It was very evident that he had caught a tartar; so he put as good face on the affair as possible, and rung the bell, saying "If Ida is willing, I shall not object of course. Are you willing to marry this rattlehead?" asked the farmer as his daughter came into the room.

"If you wish it, father. You know I am very obedient."

"Take her, Whipple take her; you are worthy of her. But mind, don't you never knock your father-in-law down, for it wouldn't look affectionate."

A few weeks after there was an unusual stir even for such a lively place as the Newell farm. There was a bridal party, and a right hearty welcome for all who chose to come; and there were scores of ingoers and out, and all the villagers wished the young couple a long and happy life. - Literary Companion.

FROST MUSIC.-I was once belated in Canada on a fine winter day, and was riding over the hard snow on the margin of a wide lake, when the most faint and mournful wail that could break a solemn silence seemed to pass through me like a dream. I stopped my horse and listened. For some time I could not satisfy myself whether the music was in the air or in my own brain. I thought of the pine forest which was not far off; but the tone was not harp-like, and there was not a breath of wind. Then it swelled and approached; and then it seemed to be miles away in a moment; and again it moaned, as if under my very feet. It was, in fact, almost under my feet. It was the voice of the winds imprisoned under the pall of ice suddenly cast over them by the the peremptory power of the frost. Nobody there had made air holes, for the place was a wilderness; and there was no escape for the winds, which must moan on till the spring warmth should release them. They were fastened down in silence; but they would come out with an explosion when, in some still night, after a warm spring day, the ice would blow up, and make a crash and a racket from shore to shore. So I was told at my host's that evening, where I arrived with something of the sensation of a haunted man. It had been some time before the true idea struck me, and meanwhile the rising and falling moan made my very heart thrill again .- Once-a-Week.

NEW YORK CENTRAL PARK .- The fourth annual report of the New York Central Park has been presented. The expenditures of the commission so far for land and improvements amount to $6,447,904. During the past year 3.579 laborers have been employed in the Park, and the expenditures during the same period have been $114,000. The ice ponds are crowded with skaters daily. ID A knavish back driver, at Chica to drive an old lady about a mile, to the house of her friend, persuaded her that it was four miles, as he had to take a circuit to avoid a broken bridge. Driving her about the city for an hour, he set her down at the house of her friend, who, being informed of the charge he had made, got him to carry the luggage into a dark room, locked him in, and kept him there till he had refunded $2.50, by slipping the cash under the door.

MILITARY IN MAINE .- The Kennebec Journal says the Legislature has accepted the bill reported by the Committee on the Militia, placing the whole military power in the hands of the Governor, and appropriating fifty thousand dollars for the purchase of ammunition for the purpose of aiding the General Government in contending with rebellion. The bill is in the course of its enactment, without a word of opposition.

IF A Mr. Hartley of Southampton, England, recently deceased, bequeathed $500,000 for the building and endowment of a literary institution in that city. The will was disputed, the matter at length reached Chancery, and in that circumlocution court the $500,000 was swented down to $200.000, which is to be applied to carrying out the testator's design.

THE ONLY PREPARATION

WORTHY OF UNIVERSAL CONFIDENCE & PATRONAGE

FOR STATESMEN, JUDGES. CLERGYMEN, LADIES, and GENTLEMEN in all parts of the world testify to the efficacy of PROF. O. J. WOOD'S HAIR RESTORATIVE. and gentlemen of the Press are unanimous in its praise. A few testimonials only can be here given see circular for more, and it will be impossible for you to doubt.

Gentleman: Your note of the 15th instant has been received, saying that you had heard that I had been benefited by the use of Wood's Hair Restorative, and requesting my certificate of the fact if I had no objection to give it.

I award it to you cheerfully, because I think it due. My age is about 50 years; the color of my hair auburn, and inclined to curl. Some five or six years since it began to turn gray, and the scalp on the crown of my head to lose its sensibility and landruff to form upon it. Each of these disagreeabilities increased with time, and about 4 months since a fourth was added to them, by hair falling off the top of my head and threatening to make me bald.

In this unpleasant predicament I was induced to try Wood's Hair Restorative, mainly to arrest the falling off of my hair, for I had really no expectation that gray hair could ever be restored to its original color except from dyes. I was, however, greatly surprised to find, after the use of two bot tles only, that not only was the falling off arrested, but the color was 'estored to the gray hairs and sensibility to the scalp, and dandruff crased to form on my head, very much to the gratification of my wife, at whose solicitation I was induced to try it. For this, among the many obligations I owe to her sex, I strongly recommend all nusbands who value the admiration of their wives to profit by my example, and use it if growing gray or getting bald. Very respectfully.

THE ALL-SUFFICIENT THREE.

TRIESEMAR, 1, 2 and 3—Protected by Royal Letters Patent of Engiand, and secured by the Seals of the Ecole de Pharmacie de Pans, and the Imperial College of Medicine. Vienna.

No. 1 is invaluable for exhaustion and natorrhea, and all physical disabilities.

No. 2 completely eradicates all traces of those diseases that have been hitherto treated by the nauseous and permicious use of copaiva and cubebs.

No. 3 has entirely supplanted the injurious use of mercury, thereby insuring to the sufferer speedy relief, dispersing all impurities, and rooting out the venom of disease.

TRIESEMAR, Nos. 1, 2 and 3, are prepared in the form of a lozenge, devoid of taste and smell, and can be carried in the waistoost pocket. Sold in the cases, and divided into separate doses, as administered by Velpeau, Lallemand, Roux, Ricord, &c. Price $3 each, or four cases for $9, which saves $3; and in $27 cases, whereby there is a saving of $9. To be had, wholesale and retail, of Dr. BARROW, of 194 Bleecker street, New York. Immediately on receiving a remittance, Dr. Barrow will forward the Triesemer to any part of the world, securely packed, and addressed according to the instructions of the writer.

The Book, of all others, that should be read by men with damaged and broken down constitutions is "Human Frality, or Physiological Researches." It is beautifully illustrated, and treats minutely of all the sympoms that invariably develop themselves, sooner or later, resulting from the frallties and vitating habits of early youth, incapacitating the victim from sharing the fruition of the matrimonal state, and. If not checked in time, degenerating all the functions of manhood, and bringing him, step by step, to a lingering and untimely death. Sold by Dr. BARROW, 194 Bleecker street, four doors below Macdougal, New York. Price 25 cents. Sent free every where.
